Local Vancouver Restaurant Serves Comfort Food with an Elevated Twist

Vancouver, BC - Locus Restaurant and Lounge launched its Fall/Winter 2019 menu earlier this month with a focus on providing patrons with elevated comfort food using the best seasonal, sustainable and locally sourced ingredients available.

According to Head Chef James Green, the creative driving force behind the menu, "We try to showcase different local ingredients every season. This season, we want our dishes to be creative and unique. We're not trying to reinvent the wheel, but we absolutely want to make the wheel better."

Fredric Miller, owner of Locus Restaurant and Lounge, says "Fall is my season—all the comfort food. It makes you think about the holidays and getting together with family and friends and comfort menu." As a hands-on owner since the Locus Restaurant and Lounge opened its doors in 1998, he ensures that everything from ambiance to the daily food and drink choices are approachable, inviting and satisfying.

ABOUT LOCUS RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE

Located at Vancouver's busy and thriving trendy Main Street neighborhood, the Locus Restaurant offers an eclectic fusion of modern and classic favourites. As a funky eatery with gothic decor serving eclectic seasonal eats, local wines and craft beers, the Locus Restaurant and Lounge thrives on creating globally inspired, innovative dishes and delicious daily specials.

Catering to diverse tastes, we feature a variety of meat, seafood and vegetarian choices that are constantly refreshed to reflect the best local and seasonal ingredients.

Established on 1998, Locus offers a casually unique dining experience that welcomes both locals and newcomers alike. Open from 9 AM to late daily, the Locus offers daily food and drink specials for brunch, lunch, happy hour and dinner.
